ACUE Facilitator, Academic Year 2025 - 2026

The Association of College and University Educators (ACUE) prepares and credentials college and university faculty in evidence-based teaching practices—and provides ongoing faculty support—shown to result in more effective college instruction and enhanced student satisfaction and success. ACUE offers a portfolio of research-based, comprehensive, scalable programs for faculty, including the only nationally recognized teaching credential endorsed by the American Council on Education (ACE).

It is ACUE's mission to help college educators further develop their teaching skills and provide a more powerful learning experience to their students. The ACUE modules are carefully designed to help participants move beyond knowledge of effective teaching to the actual implementation of these techniques.

The ACUE Course facilitator plays a critical role in the Course-takers' learning experience. The facilitator's guidance, encouragement, and feedback will help colleagues deepen their learning and improve both instructor and student experiences in the classroom.

The facilitator plays four key roles.

1. Guide: lead Course participants through the online faculty development experience.
2. Mentor: facilitate asynchronous and synchronous, in-person and virtual discussions of module content and Course progress.
3. Monitor: track Course-taker participation and offer encouragement.
4. Liaison: with ACUE representatives and the TLC staff.

Qualifications: Ideal candidates will demonstrate the following characteristics:

- Prior completion of ACUE's Effective Teaching Practices course
- Expertise in effective college instructional strategies
- Outstanding written communication skills
- Ongoing interest in furthering higher education instructors' personal professional development
- Demonstrated welcoming instincts, a personable and social approach, and the ability to effectively handle conflicts
- Preferred: experience facilitating teaching-related professional development workshops

Compensation: A $2000 stipend will be awarded in June 2026
